THE COURTS THE CONSTITUTION AND PARTIES

Studies in Constitutional History and Politics

By ANDREW C. McLAUGHLIN
Professor of History in the University of Chicago

The work consists of five papers, the first of which discusses the power of a court to declare a law unconstitutional. It examines into the historical growth of the judicial power, and seeks, by reference to the writings of American statesmen of early days, to trace the idea of fundamental law.

Two of the papers deal with the growth and essential character of political parties, and are followed by one on the history of differing theories of the federal Union. The work fittingly concludes with a discussion of the written constitution in some of its historical aspects.

The work is a sane and illuminating contribution—of extreme value to lawyers and sociologists, but equally adapted in tone and scope to all who take an interest in the maintenance of a popular form of government.
